This Week

The Globe Theatre was renamed the Lunt-Fontanne Theatre to honor the acting team of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne. The refurbished house will re-open April 14 with its namesakes in The Visit, a play by Swiss writer Friedrich Dürrenmatt, adapted by Maurice Valency and directed by Peter Brooks. The play is currently in Dublin and will also be presented at Edinburgh and Newcastle-on-Tyne. The NY run will last only 12 weeks, after which it will move to London. 12 of the British cast of 28 will appear in NY. The theatre itself will feature a new entrance at 205 W 46. Smoking will be allowed in the mezzanine seats, which will probably be priced higher than the orchestra seats. Times also reports that the couple expect this play to end their acting career.

DIGESTS OF CURRENT NYC THEATRE REVIEWS

The Entertainer- Royale 1/12. 5 pro and 2 con-Times, Mirror-filed on John Osborne's play starring Laurence Olivier, produced by David Merrick and staged by Tony Richardson. Two of the five pro votes were raves, Journal American and World Telegram & Sun, the other three had mild reservations about the play but okayed it for Olivier's performance. Magical theatre, superlatively performed, rates McClain, Journal American, while Aston, WTS, billed it as high drama and high theatre. Of the milder viewpoint, Kerr, Herald Tribune, noted play itself has serious problems that will make some find it monotonous and trying. But for him acting of Olivier, Brenda de Banzie and strong ending made event electrifying. Chapman, News, thought writing a brilliant stunt for Olivier, but though there was little shading to be found in the brilliance. Watts, Post, termed script a series of portraits rather than a play providing star with opportunity for one of his most brilliant performances. Dissenters Atkinson, Times, and Coleman, Mirror, vetoed show for diverse reasons. Former admitted star is versatile, but thought play a tired, hollow allegory. Latter was just bored. Journal American audience poll rated it 7 pros, 0 cons.

Cloud 7- Golden 2/14. 7 con votes filed on Max Wilk's comedy starring Martha Scott and Ralph Meeker, produced by Milton Baron-Marshall Earl, directed by Jed Horner. Reviews were all on the pleasant side. No one was mad, but no one enjoyed comedy. Except for praise for John McGiver in a minor role, the cast was generally excused. Coleman, Mirror, noted that the first night audience seemed to enjoy the comedy but he couldn't agree. Tasteless and tacky, summed Atkinson, Times. Complete lack of direction in plot major problem, points out Kerr, Herald Tribune. Chapman, News, thought show will do fine in the little theatres, but is not tough enough for NY. Too tepid and artless, except for McGiver agreed Watts, Post. Almost the saddest comedy of the season, billed McClain, Journal American. Journal American audience poll rated it 3 pro, 2 con.

The King's Standards-Blackfriars-320 W 57 2/13. 3 mild pros- Times, Herald Tribune, Journal American- filed on religious drama by Costa du Reis, translated by Helen A Gaubert, directed by Fred J Scottay. Funke, Times, noted that within its limited range the production has limited merits. The performances he rated as enormously earnest, though the prolonged religious debate often brings play to standstill. Beckley, Herald Tribune, found much poignancy and flashes of genuine humor in the play. He also praised Paul Eaton and Richard X. Slattery for superb performances. McClain, Journal American, thought play more of a debate, but found the language intelligent, topical and occasionally quite humorous.

The Recruiting Officer- Royal Playhouse 62 E 4- 2/7-2/22. 4 cons- Times, Herald Tribune, News, World Telegram & Sun- filed on revival of George Farquhar's comedy, presented by J. H. Livingston and Earl Sennett, and directed by Sennett. The comedy, the first play presented in NYC in 1732, was panned as being unfunny and poorly presented. Whatever fun there was in the frequently ribald tale was set upon with the deadweight of ineptitude, leveled Funke, Times. Beckley, Herald Tribune, okayed several of the performers, but feared the variety of acting styles on-stage, including some misplaced exuberance, proved that the actors were out of their class. Aston, WTS, billed everything as perfectly terrible.

The Servant of Two Masters- Davenport 138 E 27 2/10. 1 con- Times- filed on first revival of American Repertory. Carlo Goldoni's comedy-farce, translated by Edward Dent, directed by Bob Harper. Calta, Times, found humorous moments in the gusty old farce, which cannot be maintained for long without losing the theatregoers interest. Though of interest to theatre historians, today its construction is conventional and the dialogue undistinguished. A number of the players were commended for bringing play to life.

The Willie Tree- Theatre East- 211 E 60-Week-End Matinees Children's play with music by Bill Wendlant and Austin O'Toole recommended by Aston, World Telegram & Sun as ideal for the 4 to 10 set. From the adult critic's standpoint the best actor in the cast of 4 was a cat, but the youngsters in the audience enjoyed the show.

THEATRE BOOK COMMENTS

"Theatre World Annual No 8" by Frances Stephens (Macmillan $5) latest in series offering pictorial record of London's theatre season-1956-57 together with a record of West End plays and players rated as maintaining high standards of former editions by Rodo, Variety.

THEATRE RECORD COMMENTS

"The Music Man" original cast disc (Capitol) okayed by Aston, World Telegram & Sun and McHarry, News. If you can't buy your way into show, News reviewer urges readers to buy record instead. It's worth baby's milk money, he concluded.

LONDON STAGE VIEWS

The future of the Out-of-Town theatre in England depends upon the attitude of such top stars as Flora Robson, now touring in The House by The Lake, and Laurence Olivier who toured in The Entertainer, comments "Stage" editorials. The real stars, the handful of great names who are a genuine asset to the box-office, are not always ready to give the provinces a fair deal. Though they are ready to make use of provincial audiences, trying out their new show on the dog, they are not always ready to follow a long London run with a record tour, trade paper points out. The stars would not be asked to appear for nothing and they would find provincial playgoers alive to the difference between a visit from a shaky production on its way to Town and an established success after a West End Run.

" PROS & CONS BY TMK "

ROONEY PANNED....Herald Tribune and Post editorials panned delaying tactics of Rep John J. Rooney, a Brooklyn Democrat, who as head of a House subcommittee is tying up the essential $2 million needed for the US exhibit at the Brussels Fair opening in April. US has the talent, the will, and the money to make a splendid showing at the Fair, and it is high time that Rooney got out of the way, states Herald Tribune. With the help of a Brooklyn politician, the Russians never had it so good, sighs the Post editorial.

COLUMN TIPS....Three Penny Opera planning a summer tour, reports Walker, News...Broadway stars studying Shakespeare with Richard Burton planning an 18 month Broadway repertory season, notes Lyons, Post...Johnnie Ray to get huge salary for playing Sky Masterson in Dallas' Guys and Dolls this summer, hears Kilgallen, Journal American.

GARSON'S MAME....Two reviewers covered and approved Greer Garson's portrayal as the new lead in Auntie Mame, Aston, World Telegram & Sun, applauded star as a howl, a high-grade, knockabout, knockout. McClain, Journal American, found her more subdued than Roz Russell, but not less reprehensible and beguiling.

BURLESQUE PLAY....Any burlesque operator with a mind to do so should be allowed to return to NY, suggests Kilgallen, Journal American, after viewing The Entertainer. The License Commissioner could hardly forbid the standard burlesque sketches while permitting the British play to use every dirty word and phrase in the English language, she concluded.

CRITICAL THOUGHTS....Ann Helm, Cloud 7 youngster, cheered by both Watts, Post, and Aston, WTS, as charming and talented...Two way exchange of artists between US and Israel to enrich culture of both nations, approved by Coleman, Mirror...McClain, Journal American, would be obliged to London's Long Chamberlain, who censored English version of Endgame, if the Englishman would tell the US critic what the Beckett plays means in any language.

DRAMA MAIL BOX....Origins of the subdued riot in the back of the theatre that begins once the house lights go down interests Times reader. He can identify the whisperings of the ushers, the evening's take being counted and re-checked. But what are all those other mysterious scufflings, hurried footsteps and sinister thuds?

GREEN ROOM DUST....Plan to end ticket scalpers detailed by McHarry, News, includes theatre charging $100 per seat for first two rows. These ducats to hit shows could be sold to those who insist on seeing the top shows during their three days in town. It might allow the people who really care to see the big ones a month or two earlier...Gimmick side of press agency reached new low reports McCord, Herald Tribune, with New Canaan theatre group sending via mail a loaded mousetrap to drama desks to promote Agatha Christie's The Mousetrap.

SECOND GUESSES....Ralph Bellamy's portrait of FDR in Sunrise at Campobello applauded again by admitted GOP critics Chapman, News, Aston, WTS...Having witnessed Bellamy portray all kinds of leading men in a stock company in his home town, Kerr, Herald Tribune, is not surprised star is perfectly able to play FDR...Use of "superb" in reviews on Bellamy's job is one of the rare occasions where the word is deserved, agrees Watts, Post.

INTERVIEW HI-LITES....William Gibson, author of Two for the Seesaw, has five full length plays in his filing cabinet, all considered too non-commercial, he told Herridge, Post. Though he has been writing poetry, short stories and plays for 30 of his 43 years, he did not start to make any money from his writing until 4 years ago with the publication of his novel Cobweb. Hollywood bought the novel and made a film of it.

Cloud 7 presents a pleasant TV comedy situation which never gets started being the funny comedy the author intended. Except for the expert characterization of John McGiver in a minor role, the script, direction and acting remain on the cartoon level. The suburban types presented are neither funny nor real enough for anyone to give a darn about.

The King's Standards discusses an interesting episode in the brief history of the French Worker Priests. But the script, in its jazzy American adaption that seems out of place in a Blackfriar production, soon turns into a prolonged religious debate. Some of the actors are unintentionally hilarious in their misplaced attempts at realism in a church play.

Winesburg, Ohio can only be marked a disappointment for Sherwood Anderson fans. The diverse play performed in the huge two level set does not present the interesting, well rounded character studies found in the original. The script instead presents shallow, uninteresting country types. The only sympathy they can evoke is for the physical problem of running up and down the on-stage stairs.

"The Music Man" original cast disc (Capitol) is a joy-filled carbon copy of the wonderful musical's songs and lyrics. The same drive presented in the show is recaptured on the disc, making what might seem tepid and corny lively and fun.

The new Lunt-Fontanne Theatre, which promises to be almost entirely rebuilt on the Globe site, is eagerly awaited. Except for the refurbishing of the ANTA Theatre several years ago, there are no other rumors and/or plans for any new theatre building in NYC. The success of the venture, with its higher priced mezzanine seats in which smoking will be permitted, may encourage the owners of the new theatre--Dowling, Whitehead, Stevens, Zeckendorf--to rebuild other moth-eaten NY houses. No other group seems the least bit interested.

The honor to the famed acting team is well-deserved, though we can't imagine anyone calling the new house by its full name.

Theatre coverage gets its fair share of the NY press because it is news. But the coverage of top replacements in long run shows is not news, judging from the usual lack of reviews on the newcomers. Greer Garson's assumption of the title role in Auntie Mame has so far been covered by two evening papers, Sally Ann Howes introduction to a top role in My Fair Lady by one evening paper, the entirely new set of leads in Tunnel of Love were reviewed by none. Even the presentation of Noel Coward and Eva Gabor in Present Laughter was skipped by all but the diligent Variety mugg. If for no other reason but to keep the record and the quote ads straight, the daily papers should do their best to keep up with current reviews of current performers. Reviews filed on performers long since gone are meaningless.

Several plans are being discussed to take Off Broadway on the road. Stamford, Conn. and Allentown, Penn. producers are seeking support to line up series of Off Broadway productions. With the proper support and promotion from all unions concerned such a pioneering project could be of immense value. It would be a pity if the plans got no further than the talking stages due to excessive demands of craft unions.
